

Dr. Norifumi Takeda is lecturer at the Institute of Medical Science, the University of Tokyo. He obtained MD and PhD degrees at the University of Tokyo and completed her postdoctoral training in the lab of Dr. Jon Epstein at University of Pennsylvania. His clinical and research interests include inherited cardiovascular diseases, such as pulmonary arterial hypertension, Marfan syndrome and cardiomyopathy, and his laboratory develops basic research using genome analysis and animal models of human diseases.