Yasuhiro Yamada is a professor at the Department of Molecular Pathology, the Graduate School of Medicine of The University of Tokyo. He is a qualified pathologist from The Japanese Society of Pathology. After he received a PhD from Gifu University School of Medicine in 2002, he did his post-doctoral research at Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research, Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He became a professor at the CiRA, Kyoto University in 2009. He then moved to the Institute of Medical Science, at The University of Tokyo (IMSUT) in 2017. He served as a Director at the Center for Experimental Medicine and Systems Biology, IMSUT in 2019. He took up his current position in 2022. He is currently studying cellular reprogramming and trying to apply the reprogramming technology to various biomedical research, including cancer, regeneration, and rejuvenation. He received the JSPS prize and the 13th Japan Academy Medal in 2017.