

Dr. Yasutomi Higashikuni is an Assistant Professor of Cardiovascular and Genetic Research at Jichi Medical University. After obtaining his M.D. from the University of Tokyo in 2002, he completed his internship at the University of Tokyo Hospital in 2003, followed by his residency at Mitsui Memorial Hospital from 2003 to 2006. After obtaining his Ph.D. from the University of Tokyo in 2010, he worked as an Assistant Professor of Cardiovascular Medicine at the University of Tokyo from 2010 to 2015. He joined Dr. Tim Lu Lab as a visiting scientist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology from 2015 to 2019 to work on synthetic biology for cardiovascular research. He was an Assistant Professor of Cardiovascular Medicine at the University of Tokyo from 2019 until he moved to Jichi Medical University in 2024.

His research interests include inflammation, aging, RNA metabolism and modification, and synthetic biology in Cardiovascular Medicine.