

I am currently an assistant professor in the Department of Cardiology at Yamaguchi University School of Medicine. I graduated from Shimane University School of Medicine in 2012 and received my PhD from Yamaguchi University Graduate School of Medicine in 2019. I have been consistently researching calcium handling in cardiomyocytes. My current research is to investigate whether Ca^{2+} leakage from type 2 ryanodine receptor triggers various cardiac diseases.